Reasons for Allowance

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Patentability seen in, although not limited to independent Claim 1: the combination of elements of a car racing game device comprising of a starting gate, a finish gate, and track assembly there between. The starting gate has inclined track paths and an elevation post extending therefrom. The starting gate also has a car release assembly selectively extending through openings of respective track paths. The car release assembly is remotely activated. The starting gate furthermore having a starting tower with a vertical sequential starting light assembly, a foul light, and an information display. The finish gate having a finish engagement flags means that are activated or engaged by independent racecars on respective track paths. The track assembly comprises of multiple track sections connected/secured to each other via connector fittings and to the finish and start gates. The track sections have oppositely disposed parallel side rails with depending engagement channels, an upstanding track divider there between, the connector fitting having an upstanding abutment band defining interconnecting track path surfaces. The device including an electronic control circuit for interconnecting the car release assembly, finish engagement flags, and an electronic sound effect generator in communication with said remote activation means and source of electrical power. The closest prior art of record does not teach or fairly suggest the claimed features in combination. Dennis (US 4,872,680) discloses an electric drag strip that comprises of a starting gate and tower having a starting sequential light assembly, a finish gate having engagement flags trigger by cars activating sensors, a track assembly connected between the starting and finish gate, and a remote activation means for releasing the respective cars. However, Dennis excludes a car release assembly, information display, an electric sound effect generator, a foul light indicator, a starting gate having inclined track paths and an elevation post extending therefrom, the track sections having oppositely disposed parallel side rails with depending engagement channels, an upstanding track divider there between, the connector fitting having an upstanding abutment band defining interconnecting track path surfaces, or the car racing game device including an electronic control circuit for interconnecting the car release assembly, finish engagement flags, and an electronic sound effect generator in communication with said remote activation means and source of electrical power.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

McKay (US 4,605,229) teaches a toy drag strip that includes a starting gate lighting assembly with flag release arms (car release assembly).

Smith III et al. (US 4,247,107) teaches an electronic racing track that comprises of an information display and a sound generator for generating sounds related toward a simulated race.

Sheldon (US 3,403,908) teaches a toy racetrack set with a starting the gate that comprises of vertically aligned colored lights for pre-staging, stating, starting and foul indicators for respective cars.

Fugitt et al (US 6,647,893) teaches a toy racetrack with a starting gate/release assembly with inclined track portion and extended support posts extending from the inclinded track sections..
